PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The Petitioner, Henry H. Klein, seeks a Writ of Certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit which affirmed the District Court's order dismissing the Petitioner's Complaint.

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirming the District Court's order dismissing the Petitioner's Complaint is an unreported opinion and appears in the Appendix, infra. It was entered on June 17, 1977.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit was entered on June 17, 1977. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1254 (1). This Petition for Writ of Certiorari is filed within 90 days of the judgment below. 28 U.S.C. 2101(c).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Does the nature of the Federal Union demand that Florida extend reciprocity to an out-of-state doctor, who has met standards equal to Florida's in his state of licensure?

2. Does Florida's denial of reciprocity to an out-of-state doctor, and its requirements that he take and pass Florida's examinations, which have no relationship whatsoever to his ability to practice medicine in Florida, when he has met standards equal to those of Florida in his state of licensure, when Florida extends reciprocity to other profes-sinals, deprive the doctor of his right to practice medicine in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment?

3. Does Florida's denial of reciprocity to an out-of-state doctor and its requirement that he take and pass its examinations, which have no relationship whatsoever to his ability to practice medicine in Florida, when he has met standards equal to those of Florida in his state of licensure, deprive the doctor of his right to practice medicine in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment?

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Constitution of the United States, Amendment XIV, Section 1:

> ". . . Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. . ."

> ". . . Nor shall any state . . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws . . ."

Florida Statute 458.09:

"458.09 Examination of applicants

> The examination of applicants for license to practice medicine shall be made by the board of medical examiners according to the methods deemed by it to be the most practical and expeditious to test the applicants' qualifications . . ."

Florida statutes relating to reciprocity are included in the appendix to this petition.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Petitioner filed suit against the Respondents and challenged the constitutionality of Florida Statute 458.09 which requires that all applicants for medical licensure in Florida must take and pass certain required examinations even if the applicant is licensed to practice medicine in another state. Florida does not even consider reciprocity for doctors.

The Petitioner is a doctor licensed to practice medicine in New York.[1] He is a Florida resident, he meets all the requirements necessary to practice medicine in Florida, and he desires to practice medicine in Florida.

The Respondents are members of the Florida State Board of Medical Examiners. They are charged with the responsibility of enforcing statutes relating to medical licensure in Florida. They have the responsibility of preparing, conducting, and grading the examinations which are required of all persons who apply to them to obtain medical licensure in Florida. They have the responsibility of accepting or rejecting these applicants. Obviously, they act under color of state law.

All persons seeking medical licensure in Florida must apply to the Respondents; this is required by Florida Statute 458.05(1). All applicants must take and pass the Respondents' examinations; this is required by Florida Statute 458.09. An Applicant must take and pass these examinations even though he is licensed to practice medicine in another state.

[1]Since this cause involves a dismissal on the pleadings this Court must take as true the material facts in the Complaint. Mandeville Island Farms Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., 334 U.S. 219, 222 (1948).

The Respondents' examinations cover the same areas and serve the same purpose as the examinations given in New York to an applicant for medical licensure. The standards that an applicant for medical licensure in New York must meet are at least as high as an applicant for medical licensure in Florida must meet. The practice of medicine in New York is identical to the practice of medicine in Florida.

The Respondents' examinations, required by Florida Statute 458.09, have no relationship to an applicant's ability to practice medicine in Florida, when the applicant is licensed to practice medicine in another state, whose standards for medical licensure are at least as high as Florida's standards for medical licensure. These required examinations do not further any compelling state interest.

The Respondents and Florida Statute 458.09 do not provide for a separate examination for a doctor who has obtained a medical license in another state. They do not provide for a hearing for a doctor who has obtained a medical license in another state, in order that the doctor might establish that he is qualified for medical licensure in Florida and that it is not necessary for the dentist to take the Respondents' examinations. They do not provide for an individualized determination of the fitness of a doctor who is licensed in another state. Less restrictive alternatives than the requirement that a doctor licensed to practice medicine in another state take and pass the Respondents' examinations are available to insure that the doctor is qualified for medical licensure in Florida.

Florida extends reciprocity to osteopaths,[2] psychologists,[3] registered nurses,[4] licensed practical nurses,[5] architects,[6] certified public accountants,[7] and veterinarians.[8]

The Petitioner sought a declaratory judgment declaring that the actions of the Respondents in denying reciprocity to him and requiring him to take and pass their examinations were unconstitutional, illegal, null and void; a declaratory judgment declaring Florida Statute 458.09 unconstitutional, illegal, null and void as applied to the Petitioner; the convention of a three-judge federal district court panel; an injunction requiring the Respondents to admit the Petitioner to the practice of medicine in the State of Florida; an injunction restraining the Respondents from enforcing Florida Statute 458.09 as it applies to the Petitioner; and such other further relief as the Court might deem meet and proper.

The district court requested the convening of a three-judge court, and one was convened.

Acting without a hearing, the three-judge district court panel dissolved itself and the single district court dismissed the Complaint.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

I

THE DECISION OF THE COURT BELOW CONFLICTS WITH THE PRINCIPLES ENUNCIATED IN THIS COURT'S DUE PROCESS, EQUAL PROTECTION, RECIPROCITY AND INTERSTATE TRAVEL DECISIONS.

DUE PROCESS

Schware v. Board of Bar Examiners, 353 U.S. 232 (1957), held that:

> A state cannot exclude a person from the practice of law or from any other occupation in a manner or for reasons that contravene the Due Process or Equal Protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment . . ." (353 U.S. at 238-239).

Statutes affecting constitutional rights must be drawn with "precision". N.A.A.C.P. v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 438 (1963). The Statutes must be "tailored" to serve their legitimate objectives. Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618, 631 (1969). ". . . If there are other reasonable ways to achieve these goals with a lesser burden on constitutionally protected activities, a state cannot choose the way of greater interference." Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330, 343 (1972). The state must employ "alternative administrative means which do not so broadly infringe on basic constitutional liberty, in support of their legitimate goals." Cleveland Board of Education v. LaFleur, 414 U.S. 634, 647 (1974).

The Respondents could employ numerous less restrictive alternatives to insure that the Petitioner is qualified to practice medicine in Florida. For example, they could conduct an informal hearing at which the Petitioner could present his credentials and a resume of his practice and experience. They couid grant reciprocity, as Florida does to osteopaths, psychologists, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, architects, certified public accountants, and veterinarians, upon a showing that the professional standards that the Petitioner met when he obtained his medical license in New York are at least as high as Florida's standards.

Due Process requires that the Petitioner be given an opportunity to establish that a "less restrictive alternative" than the requirement that he take and pass the Respondents' examinations could be utilized to establish his fitness to practice medicine in Florida. Goldsmith v. United States Board of Tax Appeals, 270 U.S. 117, 123 (1926); Grannis v. Ordeon, 234 U.S. 385, 394 (1914); Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 80 (1972); Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254 (1970); Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp., 395 U.S. 337 (1969).

EQUAL PROTECTION

Florida extends reciprocity to a number of professionals, especially professionals in the healing arts. Reciprocity is extended to osteopaths, psychologists, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, and veterinarians. It is denied to doctors. The practice of these professions does not change with geography. The classification of these professions in one group and doctors in another is arbitrary and unreasonable. It is simply inconceivable that there is any basis, rational or otherwise, for this arbitrary classification. Reed v. Reed, 404 U.S. 71, 76 (1971); Stanton v. Stanton, 421 U.S. 7 (1975). These other professionals are afforded an opportunity to establish that they are competent to practice their profession in Florida, on a reciprocal basis. Florida's denial of such an opportunity to doctors is inescapably contrary to the Equal Protection Clause. Stanley v. Illinois, 405 U.S. 642, 658 (1972).

The circumstance that all persons who desire to practice medicine in Florida must pass the Respondents' examinations does not end the Equal Protection inquiry. Equal application of a law does not mean that it satisfies Equal Protection:

> "The Equal Protection clause requires more of a state law than non-discriminatory application within the class it establishes . . ." (Rinaldi v. Yeager, 384 U.S. 305, 308 (1966))

Thus, "Judicial Inquiry under the Equal Protection clause . . . did not end with a showing of equal application among the members of the class defined by the legislation . . ." McLaughlin v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 191 (1964). Therefore, the ". . . manifest inadequacy of any approach requiring only equal application to the class defined in the statute . . ." Id. at 190, n. 8, is apparent.

The Equal Protection Clause applies to regulation of the professions. Schware v. State Board of Bar Examiners, supra; Bolton v. Texas Board of Barber Examiners, 350 F.Supp. 494 (ND Tex. 1972), aff'd, 409 U.S. 807 (1972). Bolton held unconstitutional a state statute which permitted cosmotologists to perform their work on females only and barbers to perform their work on males only.

The Petitioner is in the identical position as doctors who have taken and passed the Respondents' examinations. The licensure requirements in New York are identical to Florida's. However, although the Petitioner and these other doctors are similarly situated, they are not treated identically. The Petitioner must once again prove his qualifications to obtain a medical license in Florida. There is simply no reason why the Petitioner should be required to reestablish his qualifications, especially when the establishment process entails the most cumbersome and onerous procedure possible. Removing an appendix in New York is no different from removing an appendix in Florida. Florida's purported attempt to protect the public through the examinations requirement runs afoul of the Equal Protection Clause. Craig v. Boren, __ U.S. __, 45 U.S.L.W. 4057, 4060 (1976).

The responsibility of the several states to extend reciprocal benefits to the citizens of other states is well established. Great Atlantic & Pac. Tea Co., Inc. v. Cottrell, __ U.S. __, 96 S.Ct. 923 (1976); Travis v. Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., 252 U.S. 60 (1920); Austin v. New Hampshire, 420 U.S. 656 (1975). In Cottrell this Court invalidated a Mississippi Health Regulation which provided that milk and milk products from another state could be sold in Mississippi only if the other state accepted milk and milk products produced and processed in Mississippi on a reciprocal basis. This Court held that even if this regulation enabled Mississippi to insure that the reciprocating state's health standards were as high as Mississippi's, there were other, less restrictive alternatives available which were less burdensome on commerce, to reach this goal. __ U.S. at __ 96 S.Ct. at 930. Similarly, the Respondents can reach their goal by other, less restrictive means.

State requirements that infringe upon the right of interstate travel have consistently been invalidated. Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618 (1969); Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330 (1972); Memorial Hospital v. Maricopa County, 415 U.S. 250 (1974). Licensure requirements which infringe upon the right of interstate travel similarly have been struck down. Potts v. Honorable Justices of Supreme Court of Hawaii, 332 F.Supp. 1392 (D. Haw. 1971); Keenan v. Board of Law Examiners, 317 F.Supp. 1350 (E.D. N.Car. 1970).

The Respondents' iron clad, inflexible requirement that a doctor licensed to practice medicine in another state, whose standards are at least equal to Florida's, must take and pass their examinations before he is permitted to practice medicine in Florida, is as well suited to discourage the movement of out-of-state doctors into Florida as the durational residency requirement in Shapiro was suited to discourage the movement of needy persons into a state. It is also as unconstitutional. Doctors are entitled to the same rights as farmers and craftsmen. Hood & Sons v. De Mond, 336 U.S. 525, 539 (1949).

II

THE DECISION OF THE COURT BELOW IS IN CONFLICT WITH THE DECISION OF THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA IN BERGER v. BOARD OF PSYCHOLOGIST EXAMINERS, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

In Berger v. Board of Psychologist Examiners, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975), the Court held that a statutory irrebuttable presumption of professional incompetence, in the absence of a graduate degree in psychology, or a certain number of hours of graduate study in psychology, deprived a practicing psychologist of his right to practice psychology, without due process of law.

The psychologist was qualified, as is the Petitioner, to practice his profession, although he had never been certified or licensed to practice psychology in any other jurisdiction. The licensing authorities ignored the psychologist's qualifications and denied his application for licensure because of his failure to meet the threshold requirement.

The Court noted that " . . . in order to protect his 'liberty' and 'property' interests in his profession, appellant seeks an opportunity to rebut the statutory presumption of his incompetence." 521 F.2d at 1062.

The Court first quoted with approval from Vlandis:

> "The state's interest in administrative ease and certainty cannot, in and of itself, save the conclusive presumption from invalidity under the due process clause where there are other reasonable and practicable means of establishing the pertinent facts on which the state's objective is premised." (521 F.2d at 1062)

The Court then held that:

> "The principle of Vlandis is applicable to the facts of the instant case. A part, and presumably a significant part, of the D.C. licensing process is the administration pursuant to D.C. Code §2-481 of an examination devised by the licensing board to applicants holding a doctoral degree. No reason has been suggested why the board could not fashion a similar examination and substitute passage of that test for the current requirement of passing an examination plus holding a degree . . . on remand, following a declaration by this Court that the statute's irrebuttable presumption does not accord with principles clearly set forth in the case law, the Board could proceed to determine whether Berger's extensive clinical experience, coupled with his limited academic training and apprenticeship, have afforded him a professional competency equivalent to that of a doctor of psychology who has only two years of acceptable post-graduate experience." (521 F.2d at 1062-1063)

Thus:

> " . . . Whether an applicant previously engaged in the practice of psychology misses the statutory standard by an inch or a country mile, he must be afforded a fair opportunity to demonstrate his professional skill according to reasonable standards before he is denied the right to continue his practice." (521 F.2d at 1063)

The Court required the Board to fashion an examination to comport with the psychologist's individual circumstance:

> ". . . we remand the case to . . . the licensing board to administer to Appellant Berger an examination designed to determine whether his professional skill is commensurate with that of new psychologists being currently licensed under the act. In so doing, we do not act as a legislature to add this requirement to the statute, but rather strike down as unconstitutional that part of the statute which requires an applicant to have an academic credential as well as a certain number of years experience in order to qualify to take a license examination. Only by this action can we remedy the constitutional defect of the statute as it is applied to Berger and to other psychologists without the requisite academic credentials but possibly possessed of the necessary skills." (521 F.2d at 1064.)

Berger and this case are irreconcilable. This Court should grant certiorari to resolve the conflict.

III

THE DECISION BELOW PRESENTS AN IMPORTANT QUESTION OF FEDERAL CONSTITUTIONAL LAW WHICH HAS NOT BEEN, BUT SHOULD BE, RESOLVED BY THIS COURT.

This Court has never before decided whether a doctor who has been admitted to practice medicine in one state has the Federal constitutional right to the opportunity to establish that the standards that he met in his state of licensure are equal to the standards of the state in which he seeks admission, thus relieving him of the requirement that he take and pass the second state's medical examinations.

This Court, not the court below, should make that decision.

CONCLUSION

For the above stated reasons, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

FLORIDA RECIPROCITY STATUTES

CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

Florida statute 473.19, renumbered to Florida Statute 423.201 in 1969. Certificates Granted to Holders From Other States.

The Board may, in its discretion, issue a certificate as a certified public accountant to any applicant who holds a valid and unrevoked certificate as a certified public accountant issued by, or under the authority of, another state or political subdivision of the United States, or who holds a valid and unrevoked certificate as a chartered accountant issued by, or under the authority of, a foreign country; provided, the applicant has complied with the provisions of this chapter and the rules of the Board. Board shall not be required to issue any certificate under the provisions of this section unless:

(1) The original certificate was secured as the result of an examination which in the judgment of the Board was the equivalent of the standard established by it, and,

(2) The applicant has been engaged in the practice of public accountancy in Florida as a full-time employee of a certified public accountant, as defined in this chapter, for a period of two years, and is a resident, having resided continuously in the state for a period of two years, and,

(3) The state or country issuing the original certificate grant similar privileges to persons holding certificates as certified public accountants issued under the laws of this state, and

(4) The Board is otherwise fully satisfied as to the moral and technical fitness of the applicant.

ARCHITECTS

Florida Statute 467.11. Admission Without Examination.

Hereafter no person shall be admitted to the practice of architecture in this state without an examination except that a certificate of registration may be issued upon filing of application and payment of the same fees as if qualified by examination to a person who meets the requirements of applicants for examination as set forth in §467.08 and has passed a standard examination and holds a current certificate issued by the National Council of Architectural Registration Board and who furnishes satisfactory evidence of continued honorable professional practice after the passing of such examination together with satisfactory evidence of his present ability and integrity. However, applicants who are registered to practice architecture in another state prior to July 1, 1970 shall not be required to hold a professional degree as defined in §467.08(1)(b)5.

REGISTERED NURSES

Florida Statute 464.071. Registered Professional Nurse; License.

(2) The Board shall issue a license to practice professional nursing without examination, to an applicant who has been duly licensed or registered under the laws of another jurisdiction, if in the opinion of the Board the applicant meets the same standards for licensure required of registered professional nurses in this state . . .

OSTEOPATHS

Florida Statute 459.11. Board May Issue License Without Examination In Certain Instances.

(1) The State Board of Osteopathic Medical Examiners may issue a license without examination to an osteopathic physician who is a graduate of a standard college of osteopathy and who has passed an examination for admission into the medical corps of the United States Army, the United States Navy, or the United States Public Health Service; or who has passed all parts of the examination conducted by the National Board of Examiners for Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons; provided:

(a) The applicant is of good moral character;

(b) The requirement to practice in the state, territory, country or province in which the applicant is already licensed be equal to those of this state.

(2) The Board shall not issue a license without examination except as hereinbefore in this section provided.

PSYCHOLOGISTS

Florida Statute 490.22. Licensing Under Special Conditions.

(2) The Board may waive the examination for applicants who present proof of current certification or license in a state which has standards at least equal to those for licensure in Florida and such applicants are entitled to receive a license and a license certificate upon payment of the fees provided for in §490.18.

LICENSED PRACTICAL NURSES

Florida Statute 464.121. License to Practical Nurse; License.

(2) The Board may issue a license to practice as a licensed practical nurse without examination to any applicant who has been duly licensed or registered as a licensed practical nurse or a person entitled to perform similar services under a different title, under the laws of another jurisdiction, if, in the opinion of the Board the applicant meets the requirements for licensed practical nurse in this state . . .

VETERINARIANS

Florida Statute 474.141. License by Endorsement; Requirements; Void Unless Used.

(1) Subject to the provisions herein contained, the Board shall issue a license by endorsement to practice veterinarian medicine in this state to an applicant who submits a sworn application in proper form, together with a fee of $50, demonstrating that he:

(e) Is licensed to practice veterinarian medicine in a state that will permit veterinarians licensed in the State of Florida to receive a license by endorsement to practice veterinary medicine in that state . . .

HENRY H. KLEIN, M.D.,
Petitioner,

versus

VERNON B. ASTLER, et al.,
Respondents.

RESPONDENTS' BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

JURISDICTION

The respondents contend that this Court is without jurisdiction as will hereinafter be demonstrated in this brief.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The only issue before this Court is:

DOES JURISDICTION VEST IN THIS COURT WHERE THE U.S. DISTRICT COURT, UPON MOTION, DISMISSES COMPLAINT OF DOCTOR WHO FAILS OR REFUSES TO APPLY FOR LICENSURE AND FILES SUIT DEMANDING SAME.

Petitioner's "Questions" are manifestly argumentative, prejudicial to respondents, and constitute an abuse of the rules of appellate procedure.

Petitioner's "Questions" are restated below:

1. Whether the decision of the court below conflicts with the principles enunciated in this court's due process, equal protection, reciprocity and interstate travel decisions.

2. Whether the decision of the court below is in conflict with the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in Berger v. Board of Psychologist Examiners, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

3. Whether the decision of the court below presents a case or controversy and, as such, whether there is anything to be resolved by this court.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

The following is in addition to those cited by Petitioner:

Sections 458.051(1)(c) and (d), Florida Statutes:

(1) Subject to the provisions herein contained, the board shall issue a license by endorsement to practice medicine in this state to an applicant who submits a sworn application in proper form, together with a fee of $100, demonstrating that he:

(c) Is a graduate of a medical school or college maintaining a standard and reputation approved by the board pursuant to §458.1201;

(d) Has been certified by licensure examination of the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States, Inc. (FLEX) or is certified by the National Board of Medical Examiners as having completed its examination; provided that said examination required shall have been so certified within the 8 years immediately preceding the filing of his application for licensure under this section.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS

Petitioner's statement of the case is argumentative and draws unfounded conclusions. In pertinent part, petitioner filed a complaint challenging the constitutionality of §458.09, Florida Statutes, providing for examination of applicants for license to practice medicine. Petitioner sought a Declaratory Judgment declaring the "actions" of respondents in denying reciprocity to petitioner and requiring petitioner to take a licensing examination as unconstitutional, illegal, null and void; Declaratory Judgment declaring Florida Statutes, §458.09, unconstitutional, illegal, null and void as applied to the petitioner; Injunction restraining respondents from enforcing §458.09,

Florida Statutes, as it applies to petitioner; Injunction requiring respondents to admit petitioner immediately to the practice of medicine in the State of Florida and the convention of a three-judge federal district court panel.

Respondents, Cole, Martinez, McIntosh, Palmer, Steele, Grossman, Astler, Mendoza, Cheleden and Pope (the last four are no longer members of the Board), as individuals, filed Consolidated Motions to Dismiss. Respondent Florida State Board of Medical Examiners filed a Motion to Dismiss/or Summary Judgment, Motion to Strike, and Motion for More Definite Statement.

A three-judge federal district court panel was convened. The three-judge panel determined that claims alleged in the complaint lacked substantiality and were obviously without merit, whereupon the three-judge panel was dissolved. Senior United States District Judge Mehrtens agreed with the finding of the three-judge panel and granted respondents' motion to dismiss the complaint. Petitioner appealed this decision to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirmed the dismissal of the complaint by the United States District Court.

Petitioner, Klein, has still not applied for licensure in the State of Florida, by reciprocity, or by any other means authorized by Chapter 458, Florida Statutes.

REASONS FOR NOT GRANTING THE WRIT

I.
The Decision Of The Court Below Does Not Conflict With The Principles Enunciated In This Court's Due Process, Equal Protection, Reciprocity And Interstate Travel Decisions.

A.
Due Process

Petitioner has no constitutional "right" to practice medicine and no right to practice arises under the laws of the State of Florida until petitioner meets the requirements for qualification under §§458.05 or 458.051, Florida Statutes. If petitioner should decide to make application for a license to practice medicine in Florida, he would be entitled to a hearing before his application could be denied. Chapter 120, Florida Statutes; §458.1201, Florida Statutes.

In the instant case, petitioner has not been deprived of any "right" and the "presumption" of incompetence may be overcome either by taking the examination or by proving certification by a national board.

Petitioner also complains that the Florida licensure provisions are not the "least restrictive" methods available, and that the licensure requirements are "overly broad." Petitioner cites cases such as N.A.A.C.P. v. Button, 371 U.S. 415 (1963), Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618 (1969) and Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330 (1972) for the proposition that a state cannot choose the way of greater interference when statutes affect constitutionally protected activities.

The practice of medicine is not a constitutionally protected activity. Furthermore, the petitioner has not even attempted to qualify for Florida licensure, and hence, has no "right" to practice in Florida.

Petitioner cites Cleveland Board of Education v. LaFleur, 414 U.S. 634 (1974), to support his contention that the State of Florida must utilize the "least restrictive means" available to determine qualifications to practice medicine. As noted, supra, this case dealt with irrebuttable presumptions — not at issue in this case — and the right to procreation, which is a "constitutionally protected activity."

Further, it should be clearly pointed out that Florida has an alternative to examination which is "less restrictive." It is embodied in §458.051, Florida Statutes, and it is referred to as licensure by endorsement. If an applicant for licensure is a graduate of an approved medical school or college and has been certified by licensure examination by the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States, Inc. (FLEX) or by the National Board of Medical Examiners within the eight years immediately preceding the filing of his application for licensure, he is eligible for the issuance of a license to practice medicine in Florida by endorsement. This provision is specifically designed to eliminate the examination requirement in Florida when an applicant has already demonstrated his medical competency.

However, it should be strongly pointed out that the petitioner in the instant case has never made any application to the respondent Florida State Board of Medical Examiners.

B.
Equal Protection

In the area of professional regulation, the determination of constitutionality is made by applying the traditional Equal Protection test, viz., the classifications imposed must rationally further a legitimate state purpose or interest.

> [T]he Court gives great latitude to the Legislature in making classifications. Statutory discrimination will not be set aside if any state of facts reasonably may be conceived to justify it.

United States v. Thorensen, 428 F.2d 654, 658 (9th Cir. 1970). Cf. Williamson v. Lee Optical, 348 U.S. 483 (1955).

This Court recently applied the same "rational basis" test in City of New Orleans v. Duke, 427 U.S. 297 (1976) which involved an analogous business license of an indiviual. In this case, the Court, at page 303, stated:

> Unless a classification trammels fundamental personal rights or is drawn upon inherently suspect distinctions such as race, religion, or alienage, our decisions presume the constitutionality of the statutory discriminations and require only that the classification challenged be rationally related to a legitimate state interest. States are accorded wide latitude in the regulation of their local economies under their police powers, and > rational distinctions may be made with substantially less than mathematical exactitude.

In Towers v. Kanner, 260 F.2d 605 (5 Cir. 1958), the plaintiff claimed a constitutional right to be admitted to The Florida Bar without examination. A special rule was repealed that permitted graduates of Florida schools admittance to the Bar without examination:

> With the statute out of the way he cannot show that the requirement of a bar examination so prescribed for all by the Supreme Court of Florida deprives him of any Federally guaranteed right. 260 F2d at 606. (Emphasis added)

The same basic contentions were raised and rejected in Rasulis v. Weinberger, 502 F.2d 1006 (7 Cir. 1974). See also Mercer v. Hemmings, 194 So2d 579 (Fla. 1967), wherein the Florida Supreme Court required out-of-state practitioners to meet requirements applicable to in-state licensees; Bevis v. Eastland, 186 So2d 818 (1 DCA Fla. 1966).

It has already been shown that the State of Florida has a legitimate interest in regulating the practice of medicine in this state. The only line-drawing, or classification, in which the State has engaged has resulted in the requirement that all doctors, resident or nonresident, whether or not licensed to practice in any state, either take and pass the Florida medical examination, or prove certification within eight years of application by one of two National Boards. The purpose of this requirement is to insure a uniformly high level of medical care in the State of Florida.

Petitioner's contention that the purpose of the rule is to discourage out-of-state doctors from moving to Florida is not a proper subject for consideration by this Court, even assuming that petitioner has standing to assert this claim. In Goldsmith v. Pringle, 399 F.Supp. 620 (D.Colo. 1975), at 627-628, the Court cites with approval the decision of the District Court in Brown v. Supreme Court of Virginia, 359 F.Supp. 549, 559 (E.D.Va. 1973) aff'd 414 U.S. 1034 (1973), on this point:

> We are not here concerned with the widsom of the Rule under attack and the Equal Protection Clause does not countenance speculative probing into the purposes of the Rule as long as it is not plainly arbitrary or discriminatory .... Nor need we concern ourselves with the primary or secondary purpose for the Rule. As Mr. Justice Powell said in McGinnis, supra:
> Yet our decisions do not authorize courts to pick and choose among legitimate legislative aims to determine which is primary and which subordinate. Rather, legislative solutions must be respected if the "distinctions drawn have some basis in practical experience," South Carolina v. Katzenback, 383 U.S. 301, 331, 86 S.Ct. 803, 820, 15 L.Ed.2d 769 (1966), or if some legitimate interest is advanced, Dandridge v. Williams, 397 U.S. 471, 486, 90 S.Ct. 1153, 1162, 25 L.Ed.2d 491 (1970). So long as the state purpose upholding a statutory class is legitimate and nonillusory, its lack of primacy is not disqualifying.

C.
Reciprocity

The State of Florida has the discretionary power to issue professional licenses by comity (or reciprocity) or to require examination. Application of Wasserman, 240 F.2d 213, 215 (9th Cir. 1956); Brown v. Supreme Court of Virginia, 359 F.Supp. 549, 559 (E.D.Va. 1973) aff'd. 414 U.S. 1034 (1973); Goldsmith v. Pringle, 399 F.Supp. 620 (D.Colo. 1975). The Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit made this point very clear in a case involving reciprocity for lawyers:

> The power of the courts of each state to establish their own rules of qualification for the practice of law within their jurisdiction, subject only to the requirements of the due process or equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment, is beyond controversy; in fact, it is a power in the exercise of which the state has "a substantial interest." . . . To acquire a right to practice in another state one must satisfy the requirements for qualification established by that state. It thus matters not what examinations the applicant has undergone in the state where he is presently licensed; he is still compelled to satisfy reasonable standards for competency and character as fixed by the new state in which he seeks the right to practice unless, under some provision of that state's court rules or statutes, those requirements are excused or dispensed with.

Hawkins v. Moss, 503 F.2d 1191 (4th Cir. 1974) cert.den. 420 U.S. 928 (1975).

The same question of a "right" to a Florida license upon showing licensure in another state was rejected in Mercer v. Hemmings, 194 So.2d 579 (Fla. 1967), dismissed for want of a substantial federal question, 389 U.S. 46 (1967). Such a dismissal is a consideration of the merits of the constitutional questions presented. Ohio ex rel. Eaton v. Price, 360 U.S. 246 (1959).

In Mercer, the Florida State Board of Accountancy had been statutorily granted the discretion to issue reciprocal accountancy licenses. Even with this statute, the Court, at 586, concluded that there was no constitutional "right" for an out-of-state accountant to a Florida license:

> 3. The members of Price Waterhouse are not entitled, as a matter of right, to the issuance of a reciprocal certificate upon displaying a certificate issued by another state which does not necessarily have the same admission requirements as Florida, but are entitled to a fair and reasonable exercise of the Board's discretion. (Emphasis added)

Petitioner's constitutional assertions would deprive every state of the right to determine the qualifications for practicing a profession. These contentions have been consistently rejected by the Courts as expressed in Robertson v. California, 328 U.S. 440 (1946), at 460:

> In short, the result would be ultimately to force all of the states to accept the lowest standard for conducting the business permitted by one of them or, perhaps, by foreign countries. Inevitably this would mean that Congress would be forced to intervene and displace the states in regulating the business of insurance. Neither the commerce clause nor the South-Eastern decision dictates such a result.

The alleged refusal of the State of Florida to grant petitioner a license by comity or reciprocity is not unconstitutional but is within the discretionary powers of the State. Moreover, the Florida Medical Practice Act, Chapter 458, Florida Statutes, contains a provision for the granting of a license by "endorsement" to applicants who are certified by licensure examination of the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States, Inc. or certified by examination of the National Board of Medical Examiners.

Interstate Travel

Petitioner's contention that the Florida licensing procedure impermissably burdens his right to travel from one state to another by making it difficult for him to earn a livelihood in Florida must be considered frivolous since he has also alleged that he moved from New York to Florida and is now a resident of the latter state. Furthermore, as a resident of Florida, petitioner has no standing to complain that he was deterred from moving to Florida.

Hypothesizing the case in which an out-of-state applicant for medical licensure in Florida "hesitates" to move to Florida, the petitioner then discusses a number of cases dealing with durational residency requirements. Nowhere does the petitioner allege that the Florida Statutes he attacks contain a durational residency requirement, and, in fact, they do not. Instead, petitioner contends that the requirement that out-of-state doctors take an examination before being granted a Florida license "is as unconstitutional as the durational residency requirement struck down in Shapiro, Dunn, and Memorial Hospital." Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618 (1969); Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330 (1972); and Memorial Hospital v. Maricopa County, 415 U.S. 250 (1974).

The essence of the "interstate travel" claims is that it is impermissable to penalize a traveler by subjecting him to less lenient conditions than those to which the resident nontraveler is subjected. E.g., Dunn v. Blumstein, supra; Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393 (1975). Thus, petitioner's reliance upon the "interstate travel" cases is misguided, since, under Florida law, all persons seeking a license to practice medicine in that state are subject to the same requirements, viz. they must either take the Florida examination or present evidence of certification by licensure examination of either the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States, Inc. or the National Board of Medical Examiners.

Petitioner's attempt to draw an analogy between the Commerce Clause cases and the instant case is similarly without legal or logical basis. The purpose of the Commerce Clause is to promote free trade among the states (which is not at issue in this case) and the power of Congress to legislate under the Commerce Clause does not extend to activity which takes place wholly within a state. Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. (9 Wheat) 1, 6 L.Ed. 23 (1824)

Petitioner cites several other cases in an attempt to find support for his proposition. E.g. Potts v. Honorable Justices of Supreme Court of Hawaii, 332 F.Supp. 1392 (D.Haw. 1971), in which the Court found that there was no rational relation between pre-exam residential requirements, which are not required of applicants in Florida, and fitness to practice law. The Court expressly noted that "we need not consider plaintiff's contention that the residency requirements impermissably penalize his constitutional right to interstate travel . . . ." 332 F.Supp. at 1398. In Keenan v. Board of Law Examiners, 317 F.Supp. 1350 (E.D.N.C. 1970), the Court held that a 12-month residency requirement before taking the North Carolina Bar was too excessive to withstand attack based upon the right to interstate travel and the right to equal protection.

The case of Memorial Hospital v. Maricopa County, supra, involved an attack upon the Arizona durational residency requirement for free medical care for indigents. The Court noted that the right to interstate travel was first recognized in Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618 (1969), another case involving durational residency requirements, and a case in which the Court made clear that some waiting-period or residency requirements may not be penalties upon the exercise of the right to interstate travel. The Court went on to discuss the applicable standard by which to test the constitutionality of the requirements, observing that: "The amount of impact required to give rise to the compelling-state interest test was not made clear." 415 U.S. at 256-257.

In a footnote, the Court, in Memorial Hospital, supra, at 260, Fn 15, suggested that:

> Reference to the tuition cases is instructive. . . . . The District Court in Starns v. Malkerson, 326 F.Supp. 234, 238 (Minn. 1970), aff'd 401 U.S. 985 (1971), quoted with approval from Kirk v. Board of Regents, 273 Cal.App.2d 430, 440, 78 Cal.Rptr. 260, 266-267 (1969), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 554 (1970) (emphasis added):
> > While we fully recognize the value of higher education, we cannot equate its attainment with food, clothing and shelter. Shapiro involved the immediate and pressing need for preservation of life and health of persons unable to live without public assistance, and their dependent children. Thus, the residence requirement in Shapiro could cause great suffering and even loss of life. The durational residence requirement for attendance at publicly financed institutions of higher learning [does] not involve similar risks . . . . Charging higher tuition fees to non-resident students cannot be equated with granting of basic subsistence to one class of needy residents while denying it to an equally needy class of residents.

Thus, it is evident that a statute, or regulation, which is under attack for infringing upon the right to interstate travel either by denying new residents the same benefits long term residents enjoy (durational residency requirements) or by treating non-residents less leniently than residents (residency requirements), the applicable standard for testing constitutionality in the absence of some "immediate and pressing need for preservation of life and health," is whether or not the provision rationally furthers a legitimate state purpose or interest.

The District Court for the Northern District of Mississippi considered the question of the right to interstate travel in connection with a Mississippi statute requiring out-of-state attorneys relocating in Mississippi to take a bar examination, while graduates of Mississippi law schools and attorneys who had practiced in Mississippi for at least five years were exempted from the examination requirement. Shenfield v. Prather, 387 F.Supp. 676 (N.D. Miss. 1974) The Court held that "the ability to practice law without undergoing an examination of professional competence — is not sufficiently vital to infringe the plaintiffs' fundamental right to interstate travel." Id. at 686. "Moreover," the Court noted, "no evidence has been presented, and there is no basis for concluding that the Mississippi bar examination is apt to deter the migration of professional qualified attorneys into the state." Id. at 686.

II.

The Decision Of The Court Below Is Not In Conflict With The Decision Of The United States Court Of Appeals For The District Of Columbia In Berger v. Board Of Psychologist Examiners, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

Berger involved an individual that had been practicing an unregulated profession since 1961. The profession became regulated in 1971, and Berger sought to obtain a license. The licensing authority ignored his experience in the field and denied his application because of his failure to meet the threshold requirement of being a doctor of psychology. The Court held that such an irrebuttable presumption was unconstitutional.

Petitioner complains that the licensing procedure in the State of Florida creates a permanent, unconstitutional, irrebuttable presumption that petitioner is unfit for practicing medicine in Florida until the examination is taken and passed. Of course, this is not true, since §458.051, Florida Statutes, provides an alternate means of establishing qualification. Moreover petitioner's attempt to apply the legal concept of irrebuttable presumptions is misguided in this case. The concept of irrebuttable presumptions has been applied by the courts to describe situations in which particular classes of persons have been arbitrarily deprived of their rights solely on the basis of their membership in the class and have not been given an opportunity to show that the classification drawn is not reasonably related to the purpose of the legislation. Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441 (1973) (irrebuttable presumption of nonresidency denying plaintiff the resident-rates for tuition); Stanley v. Illinois, 405 U.S. 642 (1972) (irrebuttable presumption that unwed fathers are unfit to have custody of their children); Cleveland Board of Education v. LaFleur, 414 U.S. 634 (1974) (irrebuttable presumption that pregnant women are unfit to teach after the fourth month of pregnancy); United States Department of Agriculture v. Murry, 413 U.S. 508 (1973) (irrebuttable presumption of ineligibility of certain classes of households for foodstamps).

In Berger, the Court held that the plaintiff should be allowed the opportunity to prove his professional competency by taking an appropriate examination administered by the Board. Although the Court recognized the extensive experience of the plaintiff, it did not attempt to grant him a license on the basis of such. The Court never attempted to take away the Board's power to require the passing of an examination as a prerequisite to obtaining a license, but actually reinforced that power.

In the instant case, petitioner has not been deprived of any "right", and the "presumption" of incompetence may be overcome either by taking the examination or by proving certification by a national board. Petitioner simply refuses to apply to take such examination or to prove certification by a national board.

III.

The Decision Below Presents No Case Or Controversy And As Such There Remains Nothing To Be Resolved By This Court.

Petitioner does not allege that he has ever applied for Florida licensure either by applying to take the examination provided for in §458.09, Florida Statutes, or by applying for a license by endorsement under the provisions of §458.051, Florida Statutes; therefore, his contention that the refusal of the Board to grant him a license violates his constitutional rights presents merely a hypothetical question. This Court has held that no case or controversy is presented to a federal court when the litigation presents merely an abstract, hypothetical or academic question, Aetna Life Insurance Co. v. Haworth, 300 U.S. 227, 57 S.Ct. 461, 81 L.Ed. 617 (1937) reh.den. 300 U.S. 681, 157 S. Ct. 667, 81 L.Ed. 889, or when the plaintiff lacks standing to sue, Gilligan v. Morgan, 413 U.S. 1, 93 S.Ct. 2440, 37 L.Ed.2d 407 (1973), and Schlesinger v. Reservists Committee to Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 94 S.Ct. 2925, 41 L.Ed.2d 706 (1974). Petitioner, who has not alleged that he has applied or ever intends to apply for Florida license, has not demonstrated the requisite "personal stake in the outcome of the controversy" necessary to confer standing upon him. Flast v. Cohen, 392 U.S. 83, 88 S.Ct. 1942, 20 L.Ed.2d 947 (1968); Association of Data Processing Service Organizations, Inc. v. Camp, 397 U.S. 150, 90 S.Ct. 827, 25 L.Ed.2d 184 (1970).

In order for a petition for writ of certiorari to be granted there must be special and important reasons. " 'Special and important reasons' imply a reach to a problem beyond the academic or the episodic." Rice v. Sioux City Memorial Park Cemetery, Inc., 349 U.S. 70, 74 (1955).

Since no case or controversy is presented by petitioner, the United States District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction and the complaint was properly dismissed. Muskrat v. United States, 219 U.S. 346, 31 S.Ct. 250, 55 L.Ed. 246 (1911).

As such, the petition for writ of certiorari must be denied.

CONCLUSION

For the above stated reasons, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,
